

The Department of Statistics at Oxford is currently advertising two 3-year postdoctoral positions in probability, to work with me on a project concerning random graphs and their scaling limits. I would be very grateful if you could bring this to the attention of any suitable people that you know. Potential candidates should feel free to contact me directly.

More details are available from the university's jobs page where there are links to a detailed job description and the online application form.

The start date is flexible (but must be no later than January 2018).

The closing date for applications is 12 noon (GMT) on 3 March 2017.

Interviews will be held on 16 March 2017.

Many thanks and best wishes,

Christina Goldschmidt.
